

FIGHT TO CONTROL OHIO CONVENTION

Question of Indorsing President or Senators.

TAX SPEECH WIDENS BREACH

Foraker Announces Opposition to Proposal to Place Limit on Private Fortunes.

The coming State convention of Ohio Republicans will see a fight over the plank in the platform devoted to President Roosevelt and his Administration. It is safe to say that a declaration for the inheritance tax plan of limiting private fortunes, advanced by the President on Saturday, will be opposed by both Ohio Senators and it is already apparent that they will have strong support for such an attitude.

Nor is such a plank as that suggested by Governor Herrick and Wade Ellis for the last convention, "We stand for Roosevelt and everything that he stands for," at all likely to meet with the Senatorial acquiescence. Senator Dick headed off that plank last year and the frank explanation was made by those in control that, "We stand for Roosevelt and what he stands for as long as what he stands for is Republican."

Same Fight on Other Lines.

Then it was the tariff and a railroad rate regulation policy in question. Now it will be an agitation for the limiting of private fortunes that the ruling body of the party in Ohio will be asked to pass upon as to whether it is good Republican doctrine.

Rather a number of Ohio Republicans here regard it as socialistic doctrine. General Grosvenor has made it his with a fervid indorsement. Other members of the Ohio delegation generally prefer to remain silent. But Senator Foraker spoke his mind today.

Foraker Against Proposed Tax.

He was asked if the Ohio State convention would be likely to put the proposition to limit fortunes with an inheritance tax in the platform, and said: "I cannot undertake to say what the convention will do, but the people of Ohio have just got through an experience with an inheritance tax. On the face of the returns it does not appear that they think very well of a death tax. As I understand it, this new proposition is one to limit private fortunes. I do not believe that the people of the country will approve any plan to limit individual opportunity."

There was a fight already in prospect for the next Republican State convention as to whether that body would take its position with the President or the two Ohio Senators. Senator Foraker has been in open opposition to the Administration rate program, and Senator Dick, despite his letter to the Legislature, has shown no great activity in championing of the Roosevelt bill. Senator Foraker led the forces that defeated the measure in the Statehood, and Senator Dick was instrumental in killing the Philippine tariff bill.

Saturday Speech Complicates Situation.

The President's last speech has complicated this already delicate situation. The decision of the Ohio convention as to whether it will accept the President's invitation to follow him into these new fields of proposed national legislation, as to whether it will "stand for everything that he stands for," will have a national significance. "The big, strong men of the Republican party will make a stand in conventions this summer, as they have made a stand in the Senate this winter against Rooseveltism. They will fight against having Rooseveltism indorsed as Republicanism in the various State platforms, and on the stump. This is their first step toward recapturing control of the party in 1908. All eyes will be on Ohio because there Foraker, leader of the conservatives on the Senate floor and talked of as the Presidential candidate of a conservative reaction, will have his future staked on the result."

Nethersole's Snub to Mrs. Carter Starts War Between Actresses

All Over a Misfit Matinee, a Press Agent's Blunder, and the Return of a Present.

CHICAGO, April 17.—Olga Nethersole and Mrs. Leslie Carter will perhaps never more be able to see or speak to each other. The trouble arose over the professional matinee which Miss Nethersole gave last Thursday afternoon. "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" was the play, and all members of the profession were invited. Early in the week Mrs. Carter received tickets for a box at the performance.

The matinee was advertised merely as an extra matinee. Mrs. Carter's press agent assured that actress that Miss Nethersole was giving the special matinee in her honor, and that the box was tendered with Miss Nethersole's express compliments.

Mrs. Carter was in her box, regarded by a goodly following as the guest of honor.

After the matinee Mrs. Carter went to a jewelry store, where she purchased the box in which she carried the bracelet, on which she had engraved appropriate sentiments from her to Miss Nethersole.

When Superintendent Stuart hears the testimony of Miss Mary P. Shipman this afternoon the examination of the teachers, who signed the charges against Addison I. Gardner, principal of the McKinley Manual Training School, which was filed with the Board of Education last Wednesday night, will be completed.

All of the eleven other teachers have made their statements to Mr. Stuart, and stenographers are now transcribing their notes that the testimony may be submitted to the board complete.

Every possible effort to complete the investigation is being made by Mr. Stuart.

After Miss Shipman has been heard, H. B. White and Le Roy Birch will be examined, and this evening F. C. Daniel and C. W. Hecox will tell what they know of the conditions as they existed at the school.

Are now ready, hundreds of them; these values are here for tomorrow.

MRS. LESLIE CARTER.

The gem was sent to Miss Nethersole with a warm note from Mrs. Carter, expressing her appreciation of the honor of the special matinee.

The reception of the token caused a stir in the Nethersole apartments. When the storm subsided a liveried messenger made his way from the apartments of Miss Nethersole to the apartments of Mrs. Carter. He carried the box in which was the bracelet. In an accompanying note Miss Nethersole is said to have expressed herself freely.

"I am not in the habit of accepting presents from strangers," is the version of the letter given by friends of Miss Nethersole.

Mrs. Carter raged and then wrote a check for $15 in payment for the box and sent it to Miss Nethersole. Mrs. Carter won't talk. Miss Nethersole has gone.

PYTHIAN FAIR HAS GAY OPENING

Fairbanks Praises Purpose of Organization.

PATRONAGE PROVES LARGE

Paddle Stand Center of Attraction. Time May Be Extended.

"In behalf of the Knights of Pythias of the District, I do now declare the fair of that organization for the year of our Lord 1906 duly opened."

Beneath a canopy of varied colored bunting, and to the strains of soft music, Thomas A. Bynum, past grand chancellor of the District of Columbia, with these words opened the fair of the Knights of Pythias last night in the temple of that organization on Ninth street. Preceding the formal opening of the fair, Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks addressed the audience of more than 200.

He said, in part: "Your society is based upon the fundamental principles upon which our nation rests, friendship, charity, and benevolence. With such a foundation the success that has marked your brief career cannot but increase as the years pass. In less than two decades the society has forced itself to be recognized as one of the greatest fraternal organizations of the globe."

The fair is scheduled to run for two weeks, but it was stated at the hall last night that if the patronage increased or even maintained its standard of last night the time would be extended.

The paddle stand, with its attraction of getting much for little, aided materially by a half dozen megaphones and several fantastically arrayed "barkers," was the center of attraction.

VAUGHN CLUB DEBATES ON RATE LEGISLATION

At its monthly meeting last night the Vaughn Club had an interesting debate upon the question of railroad rates. After a discussion of more than an hour the board of judges rendered a decision against rate legislation. The question under discussion was: "Resolved, That the Interstate Commerce Commission shall be empowered to regulate railroad rates, with right of appeal to United States courts; that pending appeal the new rate fixed by the commission shall apply."

The regular speakers were Messrs. Jameson, Swarthout, and Price, for the affirmative; and Messrs. Newton, Miller, and Herring for the negative. The judges were Messrs. J. W. Bell, L. C. Foster, and George Seibold.
